

MORGAN CREEK EXOS SPAC+FUND

DECEMBER 2022 MONTHLY COMMENTARY

The SPAC+ Fund finished +1.19% net of all fees in December, a month in which many markets declined broadly. As we have highlighted over the past several months, in a year that stocks, bonds, and credit all declined by double digits, the strategy outperformed on a relative basis by preserving capital₁. While some strategies designed to outperform in bear markets often underperform significantly in bull markets, the SPAC+ Fund also outperformed bonds as illustrated in the below comparison of SPAC+ to other debt ETFs in both 2020 and 2021 and had a lower peak to trough drawdown percentage.

Ticker	Name	Annualized Return Since Inception	Max Peak to Trough Drawdown	2022	2021	2020
SPAC+	Morgan Creek - Exos SPAC+ Fund	10.49%	-6.69%	-1.98%	10.94%	18.03%

SPACs have received a great deal of negative media attention over the past couple of years, which has caused many institutions to refuse to even consider a strategy of investing in SPACs. Through it all, the market has generally worked as designed, with those that sponsored vehicles losing billions of dollars in search of a deal that never happened, in the process enabling the special features that embody our strategy, and give it the risk/return characteristics that we believe can be utilized in virtually any portfolio. Moreover, while most companies that became public via SPACs are down significantly, we believe their performance is in line with other early-stage growth companies rather than negativity towards the SPAC market.

After standing out in 2022 for its relative returns, we believe there is an opportunity for our strategy to generate absolute returns over the next 6-12 months. The strategy protects capital on the downside via our ability to redeem for our share of proceeds held in trust, which are now earning a higher return given recent interest rate increases. At the same time, the embedded options in these securities have the potential to generate equity-like returns. Moreover, we believe the supply/demand equation will shift over the next 6 months as most existing SPACs expire, which we expect to improve market dynamics and ultimately drive returns.

FUND OBJECTIVES AND STRATEGY

INVESTMENT OBJECTIVES

- Seeks to generate return from the embedded equity options in SPACs while protecting downside via their t-bill collateral.
- Seeks to produce an attractive risk profile with potential for upside, with low correlation to corporate credit and equities.
- Seeks to provide a moderate level of liquidity.

INVESTMENT STRATEGY

- Seeks to maximize the value of a portfolio of options inherent in SPAC-related securities in order to drive upside.
- Seeks to add incremental return via a proprietary algorithmic market making strategy.
- Seeks to protect downside via the cash-like collateral held in trust by the underlying SPACs.
- Targets 2x leverage with the ability to increase to 4x when market conditions warrant.

RISK STATISTICS

- Total Exposure = 2.29x fund equity
- Top 10 = 34.5% of portfolio, Top 25 = 60.6% of portfolio, Top 50 = 84.0% of portfolio
- Total Names = 124
- Weighted Average Discount to Trust: Common = -2.0%, Unit = -0.68%

Risk Summary

Investment objectives are not projections of expected performance or guarantees of anticipated investment results. Actual performance and results may vary substantially from the stated objectives with respect to risks. Investments are speculative and are meant for sophisticated investors only. An investor may lose all or a substantial part of its investment in funds managed by Morgan Creek Capital Management, LLC. There are also substantial restrictions on transfers. Certain of the underlying investment managers in which the funds managed by Morgan Creek Capital Management, LLC invest may employ leverage (certain Morgan Creek funds also employ leverage) or short selling, may purchase or sell options or derivatives and may invest in speculative or illiquid securities. Funds of funds have layers of fees and expenses which may offset profits. This is a brief summary of investment risks. Prospective investors should carefully review the risk disclosures contained in the funds' Confidential Private Offering Memoranda.

SPAC Risks

SPACs are "blank check" companies with no operating history and, at the time that the Partnership invests in a SPAC, the SPAC typically has not conducted any discussions or made any plans, arrangements or understandings with any prospective transaction candidates. Accordingly, there is a limited basis (if any) on which to evaluate the SPAC's ability to achieve its business objective, and the value of its securities is particularly dependent on the ability of the entity's management to identify and complete a profitable acquisition. While certain SPACs are formed to make transactions in specified market sectors, others are complete "blank check" companies, and the management of the SPAC may have limited experience or knowledge of the market sector in which the transaction is made. Accordingly, at the time that the Partnership invests in a SPAC, there may be little or no basis for the Fund to evaluate the possible merits or risks of the particular industry in which the SPAC may ultimately operate or the target business which the SPAC may ultimately acquire. A SPAC will not generate any revenues until, at the earliest, after the consummation of a transaction. While a SPAC is seeking a transaction target, its stock may be thinly traded. There can be no assurance that a market will develop. The proceeds of a SPAC IPO that are placed in trust are subject to risks, including the risk of insolvency of the custodian of the funds, fraud by the trustee, interest rate risk and credit and liquidity risk relating to the securities and money market funds in which the proceeds are invested. SPACs invest their trust assets in U.S. Treasuries or money market funds, which may also be at risk for loss at various times.

Fund Risks

The Sub-Adviser has the ability to lever the Partnership's investment portfolio by a factor of three times and will incur indebtedness to achieve such positions. Leverage increases returns to limited partners if the Partnership earns a greater return on leveraged investments than the Partnership's cost of such leverage. However, the use of a substantial degree of leverage through borrowing exposes the Partnership to additional levels of risk including greater losses from investments than would otherwise have been the case had the Partnership not borrowed to make the investments. Although the Partnership's investment strategy contains certain limitations on portfolio allocations, events may occur which result in the Partnership's investment portfolio being concentrated among a small number of positions. The allocation of a large portion of the Partnerships capital to one or a small number of investments could increase the risk of the investing in the Partnership because of the lack of diversification in the portfolio. Investing in securities domiciled or operating in one or more non-U.S. countries involves considerations and possible risks not typically involved in investing in securities of companies domiciled and operating in the United States. The allocation of a percentage of the Partnership's net profits to the General Partner from the limited partners may create an incentive for the Investment Manager to cause the partnership to make investments that are riskier or more speculative than would be the case if this allocation were not made.
